I've been building a rainbow of feelings, emotions, movements, actions, and reactions. Many times I've thought that I'd never complete my rainbow because of rainy days and cloudy people. But now, being older and wiser, I've realized that my rainbow doesn't stop because of other obstacles but because I decide to stop the machinery, go on strike. So now I think it's time to make a few compromises and get back to work.

Administration

Sister Mary Anne Kennedy

Dear Trinity Girls,

Another school year is over, one filled with all that was good for each of you, we hope. Educational communities are shaped and sustained through the cooperative efforts of the members. Each girl here at Trinity has had a unique responsibility in helping to make our school a better place for learning and for maturing into Christian young women. This opportunity will be a treasured part of your life.

We have enjoyed working with you during the past year. We look to you for leadership and service in the Church and in the communities in which you live, not only now, but in the future.

Peace,
Sister Mary Anne

Verb conjugations and different

Interrogative pronouns, they're all mind benders.
Verb agrees with subject unless direct

There's a different grammar rule for all language needs.
Garbled tape tests and confusing

Will eventually lead to student

If you have a used book, the answer's

Sr. Catherine's a tough grader, but that's to be expected,
If you really bomb a test, your grade
will be affected.
If your final grade is wavering
between an "A" and a "B,"
Always keep in mind, "No tickee, no

Sister Mary Willis

"I really hate to give this test but . . ."

Trinity's English courses serve to expand the mind and raise the consciousness of every young woman who has walked down these hallowed halls. The English teachers are veritable fountains of knowledge and we, the students, have been given the privilege of drinking from those waters of wisdom. We have been enlightened through exposure to literary masterpieces and to the geniuses who created them.

Who could forget the Odyssey, the story of Odysseus and his valiant struggle to return to his ever loyal wife, Jocasta — No, that's not right. It was — , it began with a P — Poseidon! That's it — no, it's not. He was in a movie or something. Of course, many of the truly touching scenes took place between Odysseus and his sweet innocent son, . . . darling little — Oh, forget it!

The prologue to the Odyssey, as any learned scholar knows, is the Iliad, a story of passion, revenge and honor (500 page epic — in poetry yet). It recounts the effects of the scorned king, Acropolis, — Acropolis? — (Oh well, it's close enough), to win back his wife, Troy (strange name for a woman). We, in good conscience, cannot omit the hero of the Trojans, Heathcliff. (I think I'd better move forward in time a bit).

In her studies every Trinity girl learns to appreciate Shakespeare. The sheer ecstasy that his poetry produces, cannot be described in mere words. I still weep when I recall the heartbreaking story of Romeo and Juliet. Any cultured person can recite the famous soliloquy from that play.

To be or not to be — that is the question, for I know that all that glitters is not gold, but it falleth as the gentle rain from heaven and knits up the ravelled sleeve of care — (I believe that's known as extremely blank verse).

Then, finally, we are introduced to Charles Dickens, the master of characterization. I still remember the scene in Great Expectations in which Pippin — ? — tearfully left the home of his good natured brother-in-law Faegan. And of course, there is the classic story of sacrifice in The City With Two Tails. Every reader feels such admiration for Jerry Cruncher when he substitutes himself for Sydney Carton on the gallows.

Tis a far, far better thing — that I end this strange, strange dissertation here and now.

Sister Agnella Gavin
"So much for that."

Sister Monique Kelly

Mrs. Helen Marie O'Hara
"Did anyone give you permission to speak after the bell rang?"

Miss Kathleen Powers
"The test is easy, just study your sheets."

$2+2=1$ (who really cares?). Trinity cares! You see, Trinity tends to teach Math differently from the rest of the world. At Trinity you are made to believe that Math is important, necessary, yes, even interesting! The innocent freshman begins her Math training, hopefully believing that four years of Trinity's strenuous math program will rid her of the subject forever. Little does she know what the difference between O and π is; why " i " will be useful in grocery shopping; what $.475$ is in base 7; what z would equal if $13x+4y-8z=10$, $19z=44$ ($x+y$) and $8(x+4z-16y)=0$; how to prove $\angle A \cong \angle B$ if $AT \perp AF$, FC forms a 30° \angle with TC and B is the center of the figure, or why $f^{1/3}=0$ if $\triangle x \nabla \infty$ will be so totally absolutely important in COLLEGE. (sigh) Let's face it. All it is is a plot to get us into that next institution of learning.

The wisdom of the past must be with us today if there is to be any hope for tomorrow.

Hopefully the wisdom is strong enough so that the stupidity, scandals and the tragedy of violent verbal and physical wars of yesterday will be left behind as only darkened memories and not constant sources of similarity.

Science

Sister Mary Jane Herlick

"Read the explanation in the book, then ask me!"

Mrs. Mary Jo Jacobs

"Ours is not to reason why."

Mrs. Paulette Nelson

"Where is your pass and your blazer?"

I lived through Biology, though how I don't know.
It seemed like every amoeba was my constant foe.
Life's complicated systems I struggled to understand
We learned about creatures inhabiting both water and land.
The dissection of frogs was quite a chore
Because it involved too much blood, guts, and gore.
At least we all survived Biology intact
That it was an interesting but difficult class is a fact.

Chemistry Junior year was a hard subject to take
Because we had to pay attention — it was impossible to fake.
We had to work a lot and try our very best
And then imagine we'd get a passing grade on our test.
We learned about atoms, acids, and bases
Through it all a perplexed look remained on most faces.
The labs we did were fun and to get good results we tried
The fact that we understood few of them we managed to hide.

Now in Physics we have thousands of problems to do
Between rates and velocities those I can figure out are few.
In doing out measurements for the labs we must be precise
For when we calculate percent of error only a small one will suffice.
To work with the formulas is not easy at all
Especially when math is our obvious downfall.
Although Physics is not impossible there is work galore
Since I have yet to complete the course I wonder what's in store.

Business

Mrs. Karen Dell

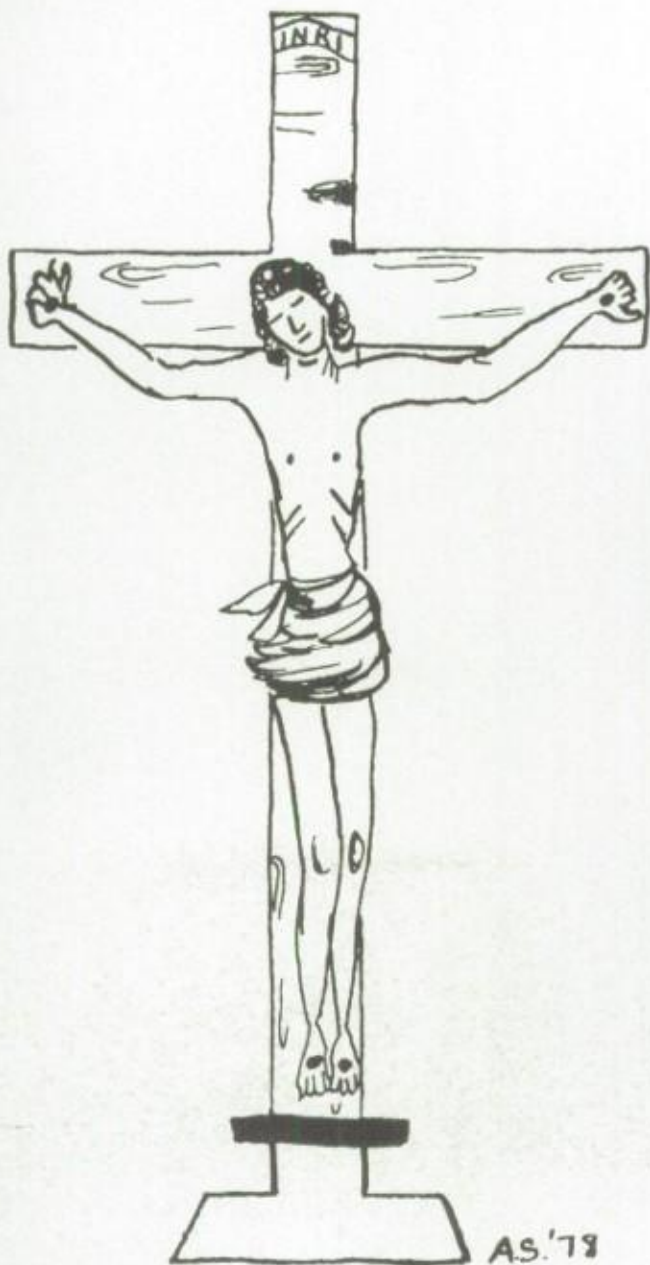

"Now we'll have a short three minute timing."

Sr. Timothy Mehegan

"It is necessary to have good attendance."

Religion

Sr. Elizabeth Daly
"You need practice."

Sr. Pam Miller
"Great insights, beautiful thoughts!"

The various religion courses at Trinity offer every girl a chance to realize her Christian responsibilities and strengthen her relationship with God and others. Courses deal with the History of the Church, the study of Scripture, the concepts of love, faith and death, and the ideas behind other religions. These classes and other religious activities, including Masses and all day retreats, surround girls at Trinity with a Christian atmosphere and influence their everyday life.

Home Economics

A conversation overheard: "I can't believe it! I flunked the Nutrition quiz."

"So what. It was a hard test. Besides, Mrs. Uchison says you can make up your bad grade with an extra credit report. It'll be worth ten points."

"How am I going to make up a 53%? That isn't going to help me any."

"Well, you think you have problems. Look at me. My dress pattern turned out to look like something out of the 1930's, and my new recipe for brownies turned out horrible."

"My jumper fits okay, but my biscuits are as hard as rocks."

"I'll take 'em home. My little brother is a human garbage can."

"You can have them. I gotta get back to work and memorize the significance of Vitamin B in your daily diet."

"Me too. Bye!"

J.D. '78

Mrs. Ann Marie Heneghen
"My name isn't Miss Horvath anymore!"

Mrs. Patricia Uchison
"Open the windows please."

Physical Education

Mrs. Regina Finegan

"1, 2, 3, . . . do it right or you'll do it over
. . . 4, 5, 6."

Miss Joan Golden

"Don't bend those knees!"

Almost everyone in Trinity looks forward to that time in the day which is affectionately referred to as "Ugh, it's Monday that means gym fifth period." Personally, I can't understand the lack of enthusiasm in the students. There are plenty of advantages to gym class. For instance the outfits we are privileged to wear, and the huge locker spaces. Running outside in 20 below zero weather during a firedrill (without coats) is another plus!

Attendance is also a crucial part of the course. No girl would want to miss a day.

"Where's Sue?"

"Well last time I saw her, she was eating in the cafeteria. . . I mean, putting on her gym shoes in the locker room!"

But seriously, I like basketball, flag football, and volleyball . . . Oh, and jogging around the gym twenty times for talking.

Sr. Loman McKeown

"Be sure to sign out the projectors!"

Miss Syms

"Do you think you'll get into a college with that grade point average."

Services

Sr. Colete Barth
"Hold on . . . wait just a minute."

Sr. Raymond Connelly
"What year did you graduate?"

Sr. Celia O'Connor
"Hello, Trinity High School"

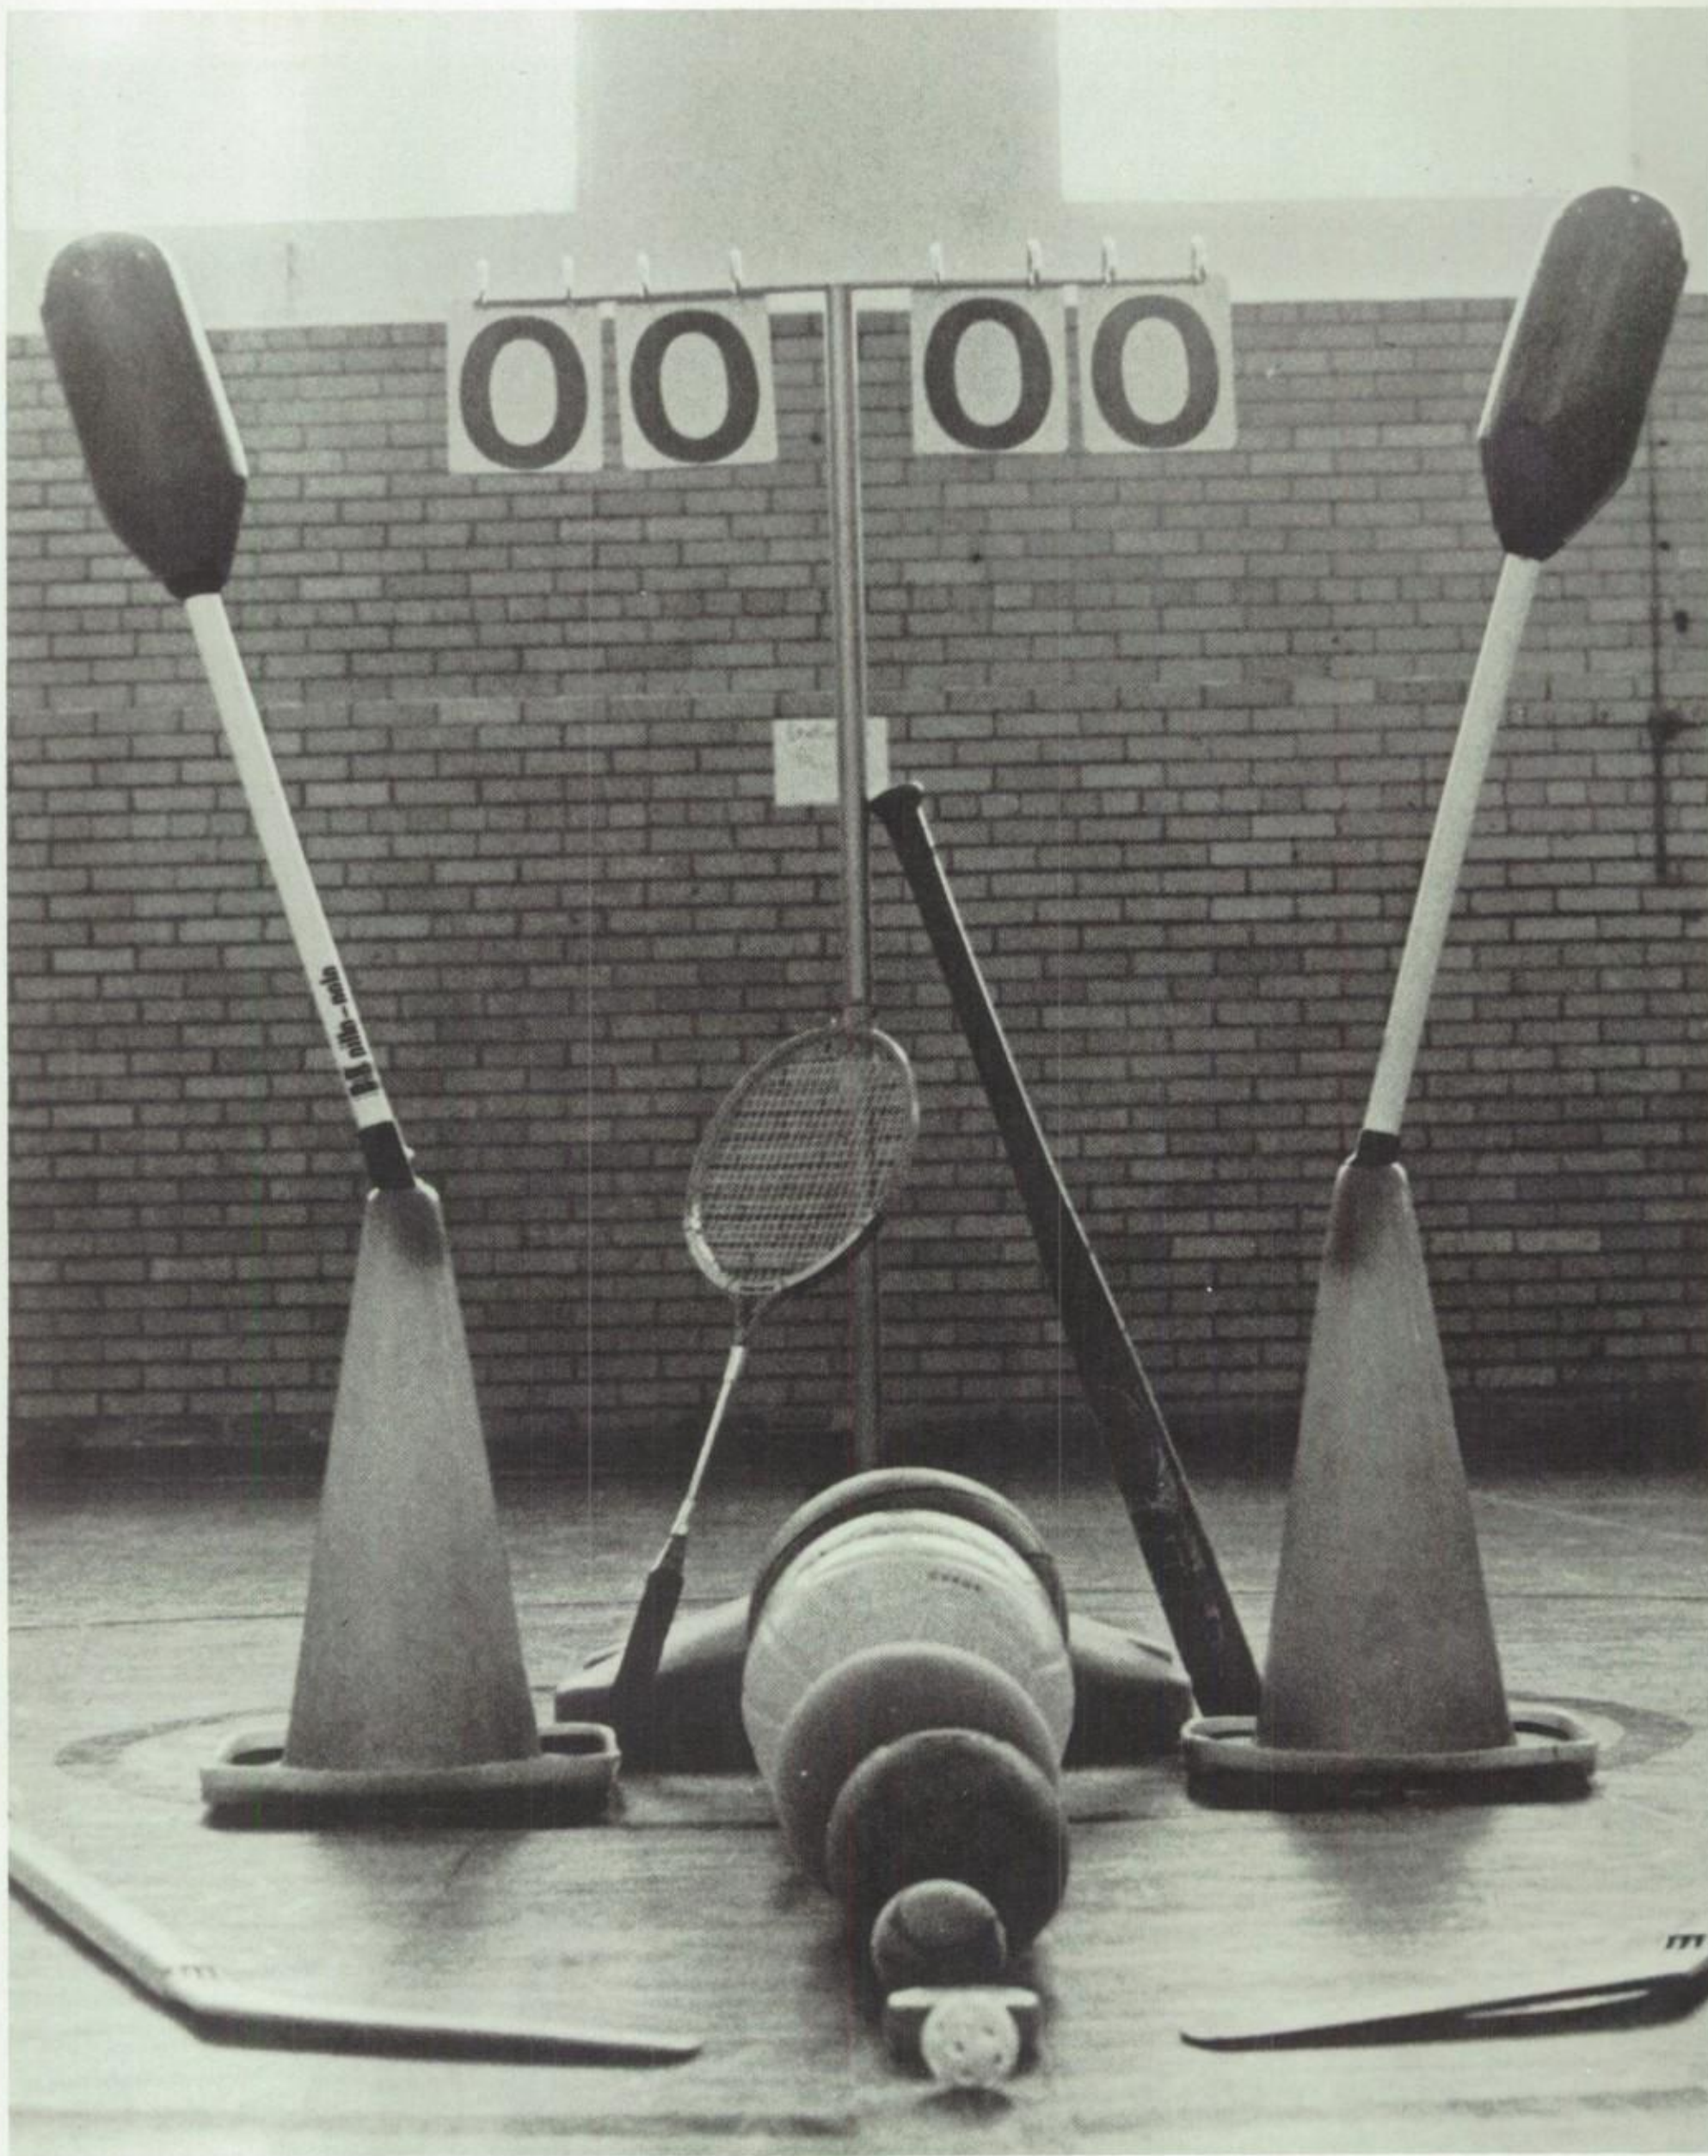

Sr. Clare Fitzgerald
"Change is given out only BEFORE home-room in the morning."

Sr. Mary Elizabeth Gannon

After four weeks of annoying the moderator and having a lot of anxiety, a Trinity student has finally been chosen as a yearbook editor. Now her biggest problem is to become a success in her job.

After a student is named as a yearbook editor, she can consider herself well on the way to a successful year. That is, of course, unless she has been named the layout editor! But even in this position, she can be relatively successful.

The first thing that any yearbook editor should do is to go to a seminar or workshop. At the seminar, the student will learn that she does not know a thing about what she is doing! After the seminar, she should organize her committee. It is always better to have twenty people who do not know what they are doing, rather than just one! She should plan on staying about a half hour to sign people up since so many will come.

The theme of the yearbook and the organization of its pages are two of the most important factors in the book's success. The moderators will ask the editor to make these decisions in no more than five minutes.

Now that the preliminaries have been completed, it is time to begin work on the first sixteen pages which are due in three days. The editor should be sure to call a few members of her committee, even though they will claim that they never heard of her, the layout committee, or even the school yearbook! Finally she will have to resort to begging some of her friends to come over and help her. (pizza and Coke is the most effective means of bribery). By running a mile to the post office, and then finding out it is open another hour anyway, she gets the first sixteen pages mailed. It is time to begin on the next forty pages, but since it is semester exam time she may as well put it off for another week.

Somehow that week stretches into three and her deadline is a lot sooner than she expected — yesterday. The editor will find it necessary to spend every working hour on the yearbook and even her few hours of sleep will be related to it. She will have nightmares where hundreds, or even thousands, of quad-paks will attack her, leaving her body covered with thousands of tiny blue squares. After a week of constant work, three F's, four D's and a C-plus, six very unhappy teachers, not to mention her parents, the forty pages are mailed only four days late!

Since the FINAL deadline is approaching, the layout editor decides to really get organized. She spends the weekend writing index cards to each of the other editors, telling each one what she will need. It may take all weekend, and she may miss the biggest party of the year on Saturday night, but boy, is she organized, she feels great and decides to sit back and relax until the other editors give her what she requested.

After two weeks or so, it is a good idea for her to go to the other editors and pick up what she asked for. Typical responses to her inquiries might be: "What index card?" "I thought it was just a detention slip so I threw it out." or even "I thought you were going to take care of those things!"

The same day that she makes the inquiries to the other editors she will invariably also learn that the photographer has gone out of town for a month and that the deadline is not March thirtieth but rather March third, two weeks ago! At this point, most of the other kids have noticed that she is a yearbook editor. Somehow the three Polaroid cameras around her neck may give her away. Of course, the notepad and pencil, bottle of ink and drawing board, and the stack of quad-paks up to her neck may also be important clues.

After grabbing every friend, enemy, or other available person to work on her layouts, even more F's, and four nervous breakdowns, the final forty pages of the book are turned in!

Big-Little Sister Picnic

What better way is there to spend a relaxing Sunday afternoon than a picnic with old and new friends? The comfortable surroundings of Rosary College, the warm weather, and a large crowd of Trinity students and faculty added to the fun of the Big-Little Sister Picnic.

The afternoon starts off with a Mass. Following the Mass were several games, including a water balloon throwing contest, Red-Rover, Red Rover and Softball. Hotdogs and hamburgers were cooked on an open grill, and groups of four to ten girls were scattered everywhere on blankets enjoying their picnic lunch. Awards were given out at the end of the day to the winners of the games. Some prizes were all year elevator passes, locker lights, and chapel slippers (in all colors).

The Freshmen were given an excellent opportunity to meet different girls, and to visit with the faculty. The Big-Little Sister Picnic was a lot of fun, and a great success.

Junior Prom

"You MUST have my name!"

"Mmmm that's good."

T'was the night of Junior prom and at the Smith's house,
 Susy was wondering, "Will he be a louse?"
 Her new satin dress had been tailored with care
 At least there was no problem with what to wear.
 The boutonniere lay frozen inside its bag,
 Little brother had placed it in the freezer for a gag.
 Mother and Father were already stationed at the door,
 As the children peered out the window, all four.
 They anxiously awaited the arrival of Susy's date,
 as the clock struck seven, she panicked, he was late!
 By the time seven-thirty rolled around,
 The clunking of a car was the only sound.
 As it turned into the driveway, everyone screamed, "He's here!"
 As the young man emerged from the car, little brother said, "He looks queer."
 Susy scratched him and ordered him to remain quiet,
 "So he's not super but he's supposed to be a riot."
 As the doorbell rang, Mother rushed to greet him with all her charms,
 The door flew open and he happened to stumble into her arms.
 Susy handed him his frozen carnation and with a laughing air,
 Told him he'd be the only one with a flower so rare.
 Naturally Dad took 100 pictures of Susy and her date,
 The camera was flashing at quite an extreme rate.
 By the time they got to the dance
 Susy had just about given up on romance
 But the elegant room and the heavenly band,
 Made Junior prom nothing short of grand.

Since the discovery of the Sapodilla tree (sapota achras) found in many tropic localities, the art of chewing gum has been passed down through many generations. It is no surprise that high school students have savored its flavorful aroma and its pleasing affect on ones palate. Unfortunately, certain instructors employed by various institutions feel that this "habit" is grossly disgusting. On behalf of my peers, I will have to disagree.

Every overworked high schooler understands that a piece of Bazooka can release built up tensions caused by voluminous stacks of homework. On SAT and ACT placement exams, students have been known to score as much as 50% higher if they chew gum to conquer inner frustrations.

I now demand that gumchewers of the world gain some recognition for the scorns and jibes they are forced to bear. It is time we come out of the closet and launch a verbal warfare for our cause.

Morning Homeroom

At 8:15 the warning bell sounds alerting Trinity students and faculty that morning homeroom will begin in precisely five minutes. The casual atmosphere in the halls quickly changes to a static frenzy as girls dash through the crowded corridors to their lockers. All previous conversations are temporarily forgotten in order to avoid a detention given for tardiness. Racing against the clock one has barely enough time to hurl off the comfortable pair of jeans and change into the wrinkled skirt that was hurriedly and uncaringly tossed into the bottom of the locker the night before. With seconds to spare and an armful of heavy school books, she dashes into her homeroom where her teacher stands keeping guard at the door. The second bell echoes through the now empty hallways and morning prayer begins. Students half-heartedly listen to the announcements given by Mrs. Brady telling the important news of the day (or at least what seems important to her and the faculty). After the last announcement is given the precious conversations are resumed and an increased volume of enthusiastic voices rises to an almost unbearable state. It is hard to believe that anyone could think among such noise but there are the select few who struggle through the remaining 20 minutes trying to finish up homework for their first period class. All too suddenly the bell rings and the sounds of voices changes to footsteps and the hope of ever completing homework vanishes.

Junior Ring Ceremony

One of the most anticipated events of Junior year is Junior Ring Ceremony. Juniors received their class rings in the fall of 1977, the ring symbolizes her membership in the student body of Trinity High School. A Mass was incorporated into the ceremony, and each girl was given a flower. After the ceremony, a short reception was held in the Senior Lounge. Girls enthusiastically turned each others rings, trying to reach the magic number of seventy-nine, (and leaving the last one for a special friend?) The girls and their invited guests will remember the special feeling that they all had when they were together.

Open House

There is one day in the year when Trinity is not only infested with students and teachers but also with hundreds, or maybe even thousands, of junior high school students and their parents. This is the day of the Trinity Open House. Each perspective student and her parents gets a guided tour of the school by an expert — a Trinity student. Parents are often impressed by how much information the students are able to give. Little do they know what goes on in the guides' meeting room before the tours start.

"I need a guide sheet. I can't find my way around this school by myself!"

"Where's room 401? I thought the only thing on the fourth floor was the swimming pool!"

Finally one brave guide takes a tour through the school. On her return she is invariably asked:

"How did it go?"

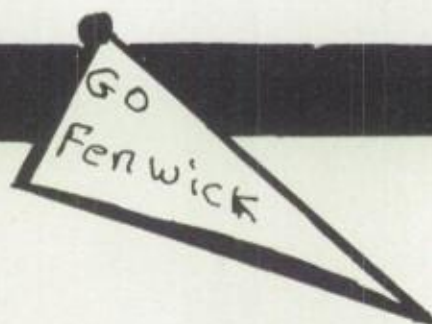

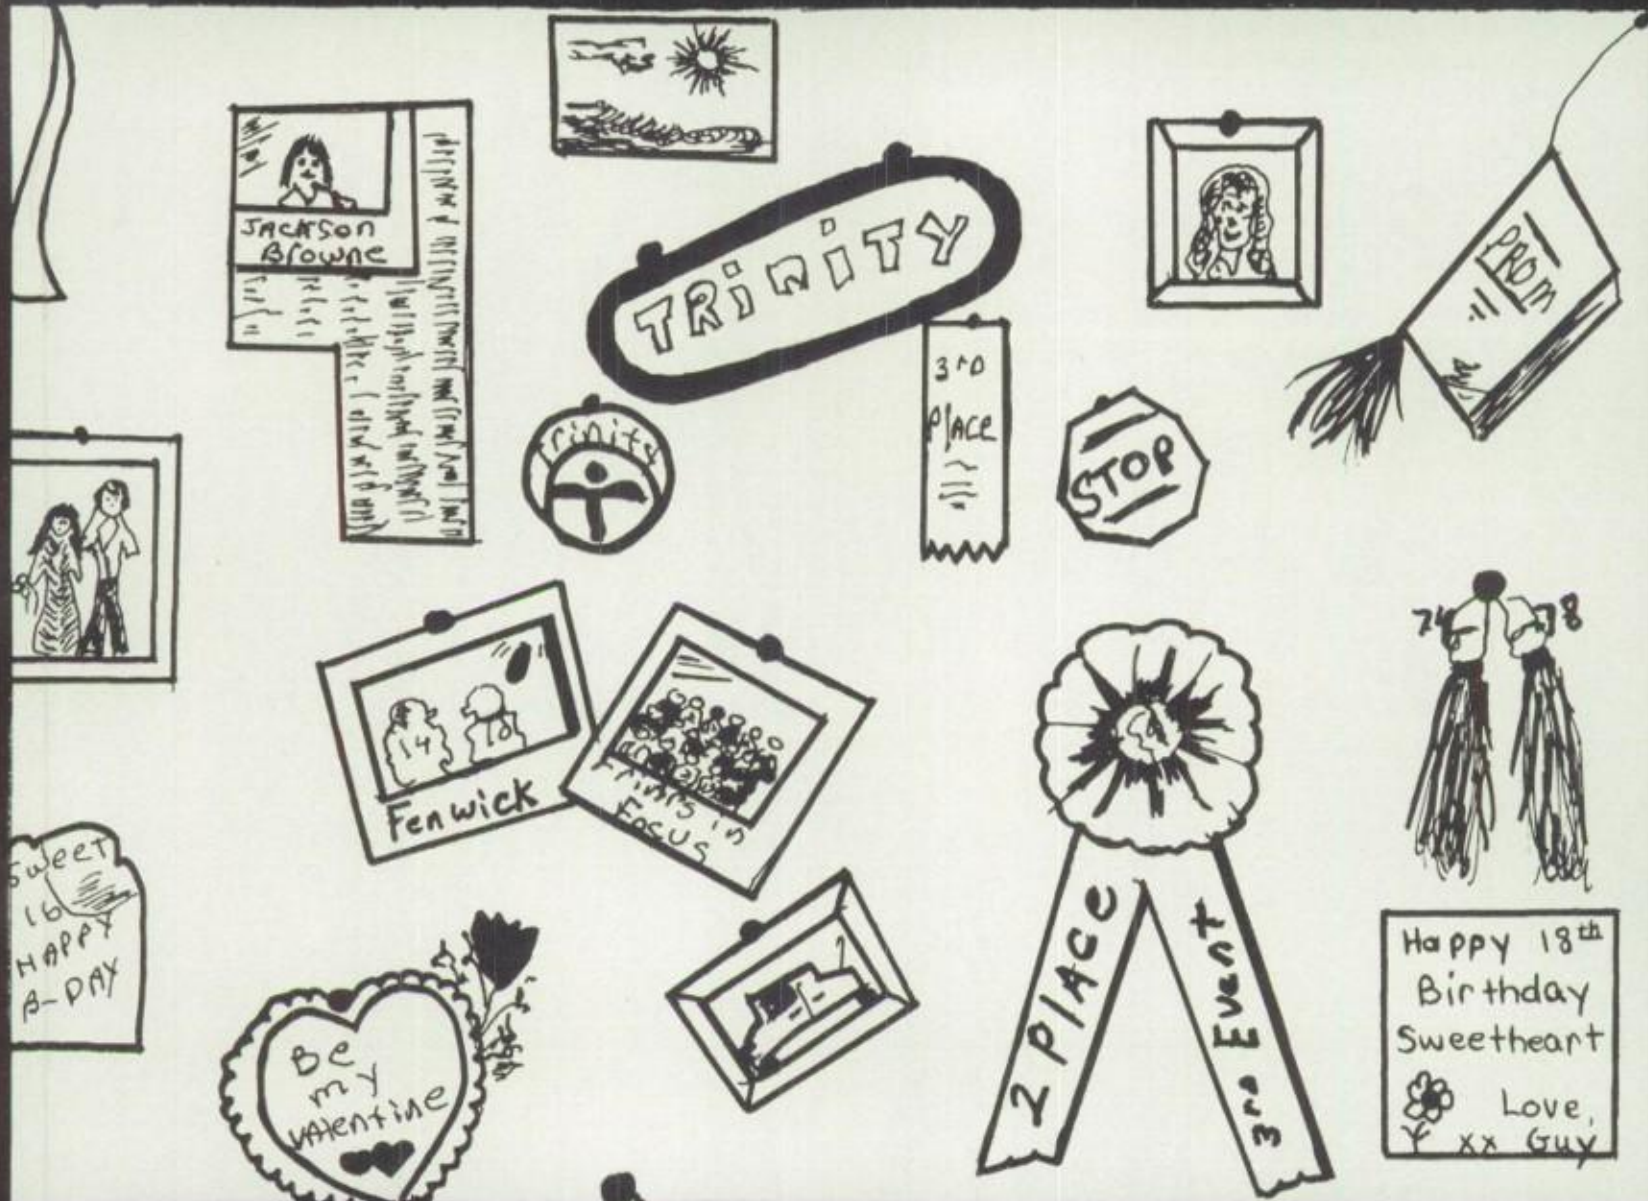

"Okay, I guess."

"Well, what rooms should we be sure to take them to?"

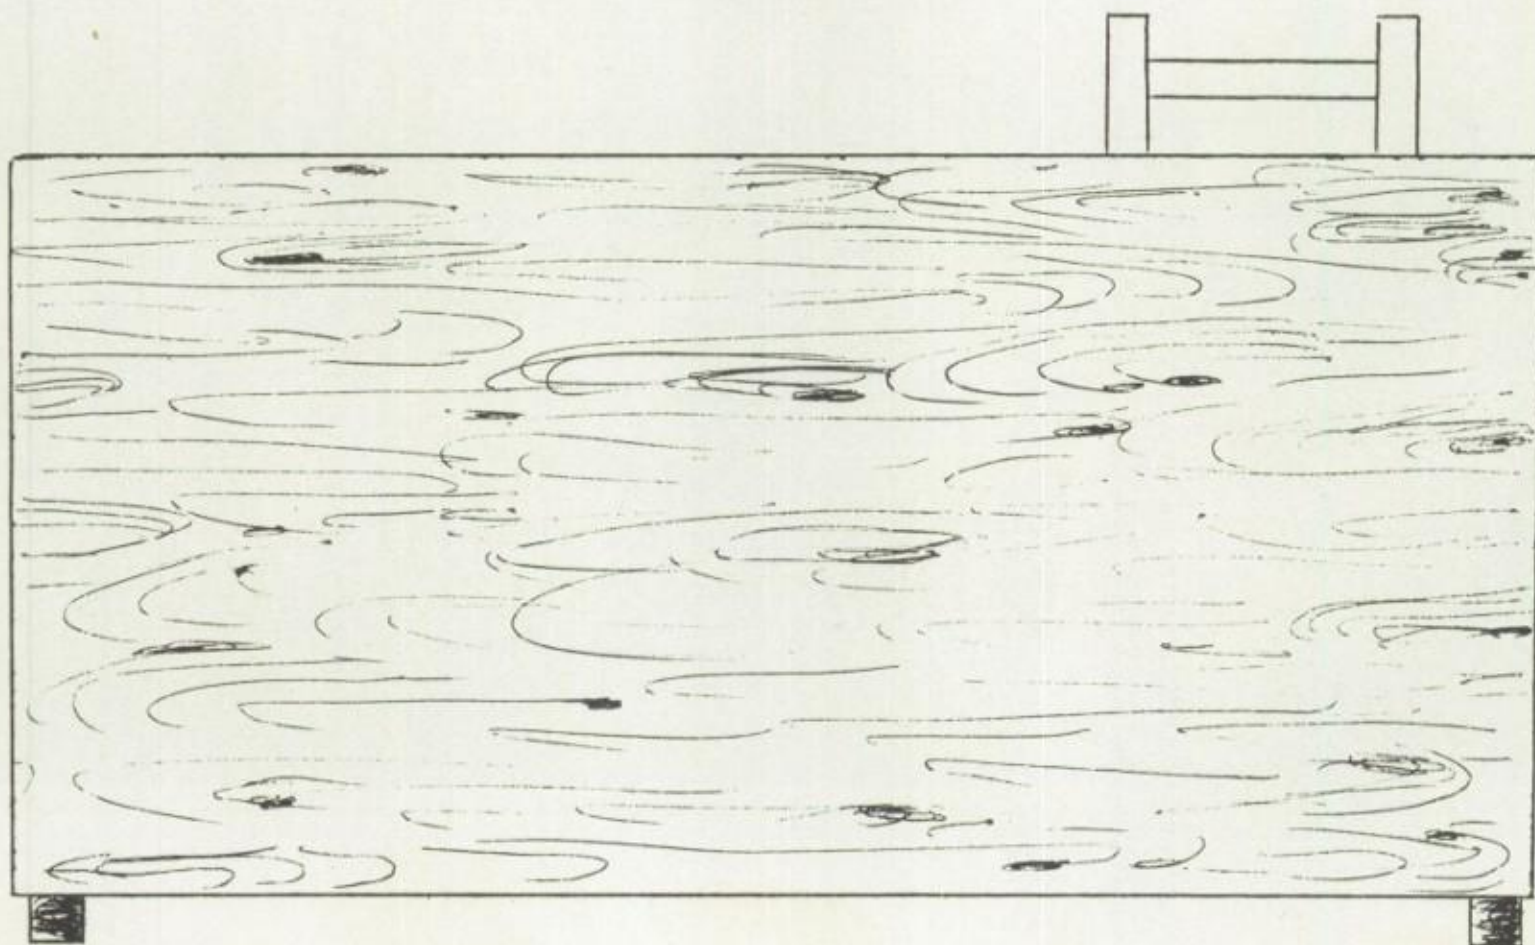

"Be sure to go to 308 and 314."

What is so special about rooms 308 and 314? Besides being able to show perspective students Home Ec. and History rooms, there are demonstrations of the cooking done in Home Ec. classes and the foods eaten in countries studied in World History. Plus there are plenty of samples!

"Will any college accept me?"

When one has become a senior at Trinity High School one can rightly feel that the distinction has been well earned. Ever since Freshman year each student has been bombarded by impossible problems cleverly constructed by conniving teachers. Some educators feel it is fair to put hard questions on tests to the dismay of their harassed pupils. To stifle the creativity of some students teachers will refuse to accept anything other than the "ideal" answer to such things as math problems.

In addition to the vast amount of time which must be devoted to study should a student desire to graduate, there are other trials which must be borne. If a girl is even a tenth of a second late in the morning for homeroom a triumphant moderator may menacingly say, "Detention." No matter how plausible an excuse may be, if one has no note she must endure forty extra minutes of captivity after school when she has been dying to leave since 8:20.

In many classes a girl gets an irresistible urge to sleep. This may be due to long hours of monotone monologues which tend to become slightly boring.

Study Hall is a silent call to which Freshmen, Sophomores, and Juniors are committed. Even a cough from a student may extract a cold stare from the person in charge. A dropped pencil is a catastrophe.

The only time allotted to constructive conversation between students (who invariably have matters of importance to discuss) is the lunch period. If the person to whom one wishes to address herself does not happen to share the same lunch time one is absolutely out of luck. The only other alternative for an unfortunate student in this predicament is to try and squeeze her precious words into the four measly minutes allowed for passage between classes. In a tragic life and death situation some desperate students even resort to whispering in class. When this last action is decided upon the student must be willing, if caught, to face the consequences of such a grave violation.

At the end of the day each student has to return to homeroom where teachers love to prolong the torture with lengthy and tedious announcements.

It is no wonder after four years of such treatment Seniors are slightly anxious to leave!

The Ghosts of Trinity High

The news flew through the halls, and soon everyone was whispering the story. "Did you hear about the picture? Trinity has ghosts in the chapel." Disbelievers were quickly assured it was the honest truth, but if they still scoffed at the idea, they were urged to go see for themselves. As a result, all day Mrs. Matthews was forced to pull out the picture and tell the story over and over again. She explained how the picture was taken on a cloudy day in the chapel. It was just a routine shot for the yearbook, but this one was different. When the film was developed, this picture was thought to be ruined by the strange white lines zig-zagging across the print. Closer inspections also revealed two grayish-white shadows in the lower right half of the scene, but nothing much was thought about this, since the defects were probably ordinary printing mistakes. The picture was thrown in a drawer and forgotten. Later, when Mrs. Matthews was speaking to her religion classes about ghosts, energy auras, and the photography of these things, the picture was remembered. Excitement grew when it was discovered how much this photo resembled examples of ectoplasmic photography found in several books specifically written on this phenomena. Imagination was all that was needed to transform the blurs into the vague outlines of two nuns, dressed in old-fashioned habits, on their knees praying. It is easy to believe in the possibility of ghosts in our school, especially in the chapel, where nuns were cloistered long ago. With all this excitement, what do the ghosts think? Are they angry at being disturbed? Let's hope not; we need all the extra help we can get.

Quiet moments

Attention Students: We're breaking out!

I have set aside a place for you, my friends, within my soul. Amidst my priceless treasures, in the garden of my hopes and dreams; Among the smiles and the tears, the laughter and abounding joy shall there be a place your own for all eternity.

Notice those long lines?

On the count of three, we'll all ditch class . . .

No, two plus two does not equal five!?

An eminent explosion.

Trinity's Archeologists.

Are they edible?

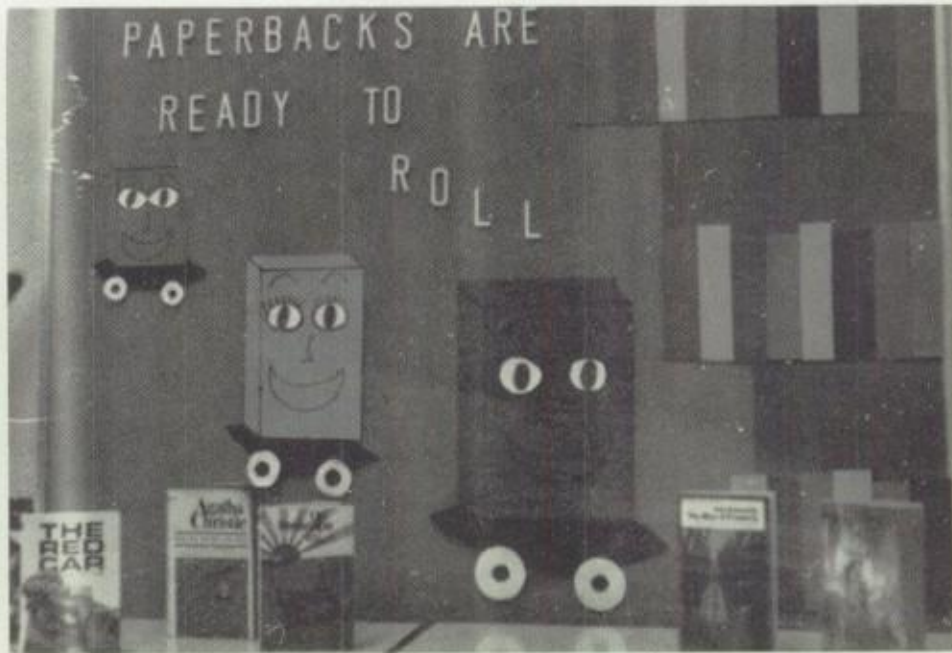

Ready for fumigation.

Don't worry, a 57% won't ruin YOUR grade!

I forgot the combination!

Do you think Harvard will take me?

Please don't ever say that "someday" never comes if that's true for you — then you have never lived.
 Today was a someday,
 oh, the kind you don't forget,
 a simple special day of friends and living and hoping and being.
 A day when all the rain you could have could never fade the sun from your eyes,
 When no problem in the world could steal the laughter from your smile
 A day when rolling headlong,
 skywhirling,
 down a fog-wet green hillside ranked among the most important things in life.
 When striking out was just as good as homeruns
 When getting tossed in the creek, ice cold meant more than any promise.
 When flying was entirely possible — sometimes probable and always real, as living is real.
 A day when the most desperate of arguments could be settled in a marshmallow war
 When rootbeer was king and there were places to go and lives to plan
 and songs to sing even when you didn't know the words and there was clapping when it was over because it was good, and right, and it mattered more than anything — except maybe screaming out the windows at the top of your lungs — just to celebrate.
 And especially when you cried . . .
 because there was too much sad in you.
 And when you cried because there was too much wonderful and crying was all that you could do.
 And finally
 when the rain stopped
 and the sun came out for just a minute
 before the dark and the night.
 And it touched your soul
 and took your hand
 and said "Today is everything!"
 and told you of the friends you've yet to meet and the worlds you have to find and the dreams you're going to live and the somedays you will always have.
 you must make this that day.
